Wildman Lake Lodge is a deluxe wilderness lodge facility located at the base of glacier-shrouded Mt. Veniaminof, on the banks of Ocean River, one of Alaska's finest clear water sport fishing streams. You will not find a more comfortable and finely appointed sport hunting lodge in all of Alaska. Wildman Lake Lodge is the perfect choice for corporate groups, hunting couples or the most discriminating trophy hunter. Lodge guests enjoy comfortable duplex cabins, each with a full bathroom and hot shower, baseboard heat and continuous electrical power. The lodge chef serves incredibly delicious meals in our spacious dining room. Big game hunts are conducted from comfortable tented spike camps where hunters are served whole foods and frozen meals prepared by our lodge chef. Special dehydrated meals are used only as back up. All of the food, supplies and camp gear are provided for your hunt. Clients need only bring their favorite rifle (30 caliber magnum or larger), ammunition, personal clothing, footwear and a good quality sleeping bag.

Our experienced bush pilots will fly each hunter and his guide from the main lodge to their own private spike camp to hunt for the trophy desired. All hunting is done Fair-Chase, from remote wilderness spike camps. Our camps are checked often by: radio, satellite telephone or one of the lodge's numerous bush aircraft. Each Wildman Lake Lodge hunting guide is a licensed professional, trained in First Aid and experienced in the situations that arise in the field such as: judging trophies, skinning, butchering and fleshing. The Wildman Lake Lodge guides will also see to the field care, fleshing and salting of your trophy as well as the other necessary duties in and around the spike camp.

The bear that finally went away...

Opening Day brought southeast wind and rain to this Pacific side camp, although between squalls, guide Jason Semler showed hunter David Ackerman several nice bear fishing the nearby river. Day two was not much better, but they did make an unsuccessful stalk just before dark. Weather improved that night as a glowing full moon replaced the rain clouds. During the third day several sows, cubs and two groups of wolves were spotted fishing within striking distance of the hunter and guide, who remained on their glassing knoll where they would not could observe without spreading human scent along the salmon stream. As evening approached, several big boars were seen leaving the safety of the brushy hillside across the river, taking their place along the salmon stream.

With only an hour of daylight remaining, it was time to make their move across the valley floor to the edge of the river where they would surely be out numbered and surrounded!! It was going to be up close & personal as the guide set up the shooting stix at the edge of the brush with a partial view of the river bend, just as the big boar stepped into the clear at 40 yards. Boom, Brown and Down as a second boar suddenly appears, sniffs his downed buddy and charges the hunter and guide and ends up busting the hunter's shooting stix. Shooting two bears together can create a difficult situation. No sooner than that bear lost interest, another bear took it's place and would not let the hunter and guide approach their trophy, which died about 400 yards from the tent. This bear pressed the duo back to their camp and finally up the hill behind their tent. The guide sat-phoned again, relating to situation. Butch says "follow you instincts" dont waste a bear if you can help it... "but do what you have to do". The big bear followed their path all the way to camp, guide fired a shot in the tundra inches from the bears toes, to no effect. The bear finally burned his nose three times on the electric fence, before finally backing off. Guide called again, describing the above... 7:24pm and said it is getting dark, they are sitting on the hill above their tent, the bear seems to be retreating, tell his fiancé and child he loves them, " Butch's advice...follow you instincts, do what you need to do to be safe, ...good luck!" The rouge bear did not return and the hunter and guide returned to skin and flesh David's trophy brown bear the following morning.

Alaska Brown Bear #3 for Andy Curtis

A ten foot Alaska Brown Bear falls in the same category as a 100 pound elephant, 40" North American Sheep, 400 point Rocky Mountain Elk and a 70 inch Alaska-Yukon Moose, Everyone wants one, not many have seen one and fewer have every taken one. Meet Andy Curtis, who on his third successful Alaska Brown Bear hunt with Master Guide, Gary "Butch" King has become the 138th member of Butch's prestigious TEN FOOT CLUB.

Andy's first bear was in the 8 foot class, his second a very respectable 9 foot class bear along with two wolves, and this huge bruin taken on October 2017 squared 10 foot and 2 inches and he took another wolf. Congratulations to Andy, who has taken three brown bear and three wolves at Wildman Lake Lodge on his past three hunts.
